

PROFILE:

Chris Fillmore started his construction career in 1999 working part time while obtaining a Civil Engineering Degree at the University of Alberta. In the past 18 years Chris has become a professional engineer and moved up through the corporate ladder at Fillmore Construction.

Chris started as a project coordinator working directly with our founder, and worked his way up through project manager, Vice-President and ultimately Chris became President of Fillmore Construction in early 2016.

Chris is a long-term planner and has a never-give-up attitude toward scheduling. This is shown best by the example that under Chris' management Fillmore Construction completed the ground up construction of a new 110,000 ft<sup>2</sup> Superstore Grocery Store in Edmonton in 7 months from the date the project was awarded until the grocery store was fully stocked and open for business. Completing a project like this in this timeframe takes absolute dedication to scheduling, pre-emptive problem solving and planning.

Since becoming President of Fillmore Construction Chris has focused on two primary corporate development areas:

- Chris' primary focus has been solidifying our corporate culture with the principles that Fillmore Construction was founded on. These principles rest on the idea that the ultimate success of any project is viewed in client's eyes and that ensuring the client is entirely satisfied with our performance is of utmost importance on every project every time. Fillmore Construction has never been a company that advertises. We have grown by the word-of-mouth from past projects from owners' representatives, consultants and subtrades. Chris' focus has been ensuring that with the growth of Fillmore Construction we never lose the attention to our clients' needs that the company was founded on.
- Chris' second focus has been the development of the process, and checks and balances within Fillmore Construction that have been put in place to ensure Fillmore Construction consistently delivers on our promises. This has been essential in meeting all of our clients needs while ensuring we never get overloaded with bureaucracy such that we are no longer an efficient and versatile as a company. Our flexibility and versatility are key to our success.

Chris has earned the respect of his coworkers by always being a forward thinking problem solver who always delivers on his promises.
